Northwestern State University admitted its first undergraduate nursing students in 1949, according to www.nursing.nsula.edu. Today the College of Nursing and Allied Health offers multiple degree programs in the field of nursing and radiological science including a master of science in nursing.

The main campus for the program is located in Shreveport, according to Director of Student Services at Nursing and Allied Health, Debbie Moore.

In the 1940's there was no educational program for nursing in the area. So a group of hospitals in Shreveport formed a coalition to fill this void. NSU later took over this coalition and made it into a bachelor's of science in nursing program.

The Shreveport and Bossier area has a lot of facilities for nursing and rad science, said Moore. Students are allowed to work in the hospitals and care for patients, but faculty are always present.

NSU Senior Christina Graham is a nursing student at NSU's campus in Shreveport. "I was prior military and I retrained into EMT," Graham said, "I realized that I wanted to be a nurse so I looked at the programs."

NSU is one of the top nursing schools in the state, according to Graham, who said she is being well prepared for her future career as a nurse.

"As far as our local community around here, they always look for the Northwestern graduates. We're taught the real nursing way rather than just text books."

With over 700 students attending the three sessions, Freshman Connection was certainly one of the largest events this summer. Students from across Louisiana and out of state came together on the Northwestern State University campus to begin their college journey.

Incoming freshmen were divided into 10 groups, distinguished by color, and were led by Freshman Connectors. Freshmen participated in workshops, campus tours, registration and getting student identification. Some of Freshman Connection's more exciting events included a pool party, the "Demons Come Out at Night" pep rally at Turpin Stadium, "Late night at the WRAC" and the "Late Night Coffee House" event at the Baptist Collegiate Ministry.

"For my first spirit-filled event at NSU, the pep rally was tons of fun," Taylor Smith, a freshman musical theatre major, said. "We were introduced to the fight song, a few cheers and had team challenges."

The most anticipated event, however, was the traditional Freshman Follies. Getting dirty, playing to win and trying to win the grand prize, the Follies T-shirt, is all part of the events at Freshman Connection.

"Even though the teal team didn't win, follies was definitely my favorite event from Freshman Connection," teal team Freshman Connector Brittany McConathy said.

Becoming a Freshman Connector is a rigorous process. Their leaders, the Freshman Connectors, trained for months.

Accumulating a 3.0 GPA, participating in several workshops, a selective interview and a spring semester class were just the basics of becoming a Freshman Connector. This past year, 24 Connectors were selected to lead the incoming freshman into their first college experience.

"The hardest part for me about being a Freshman Connector was trying to make that one-on-one connection with each person in your group," McConathy said, "Luckily, I had a great group and once we all got to know each other, connecting became easy!"

"Freshman Connection reassured me that I picked the right place to continue my education," Ronny Maines, freshman childhood education major, said. "The mood of NSU was like no college I've ever visited. The competitive, yet friendly connection I had with everyone on or off the blue team was eye-opening."

KEEP CONNECTING

STORY Jordan Smith
PHOTOS Derrick Notice, Patrick Reliford

Freshman Connectors are some of the first people new students meet when they come to Northwestern. From helping to schedule classes to ensuring dominance in the follies, they set the standard for the freshmen at NSU. A great Connector makes the best impression of what these future Demons have to look forward to during their next four years.

First-time Freshman Connector Alayni Guidry wanted to help the new students find their niche at NSU, as she found hers throughout the process. More than anything, though, she wanted to show them that Northwestern really is a family, and that is what sets NSU apart from every other university.

Taylor Layman wanted to become a Freshman Connector because of her own Connector, Austin McCann. "I wanted to be a Freshman Connector because I had such an amazing time at my own Freshman Connection that I wanted to share the same experiences with other new students."

The application process to become a Freshman Connector is made up of multiple parts. The application itself incorporates a letter of recommendation, then an experiential session takes place in which applicants are scored on how well they work with others and how they handle certain situations dealing with incoming freshmen. The final process is a personal interview, and then the team is selected.

This year's Freshman Connection team was filled with strong leaders, which proved both challenging and useful. Layman expressed her challenges at how spontaneous the process and the program can be. "There is always a guideline, but anything can change on an instant, and it is the Connectors' duties to go with the flow and make sure the overall experience remains the same," Layman said. The team did work to overcome these issues, making their experience as a whole positive and effective.

Although most Connectors were all part of other organizations at Northwestern, they were given the chance to excel together as a whole, not parts of a whole. "It doesn't matter what other organizations we all represent, we are Connectors, and that is what makes our relationship so special. I have gained some of the most meaningful friendships because of this process. We were all in it together from the beginning, highs and low included," Freshman Connector Matthew Spence said.

The real work started in January, when the team went on a retreat to get to know each other better. They were also enrolled in a spring class where they learned all about NSU and Freshmen Connection, tons of important tips and tricks to help freshmen in any situation and to become as informed as possible about NSU. They spent countless hours coming up with skits, songs and dances and different creative activities to show to their Connection groups. In March, they attended the Southern Regional Orientation Workshop, where educational workshops and team building took place. A summer workshop was the last event that stood between the Connectors and Freshman Connection. Once the new semester began when their incoming freshmen are officially on campus, the Connectors put on events during Welcome Week to help them get involved.

Being a Freshman Connector not only teaches you about Northwestern, but also about yourself. Guidry stated, "I've learned so much about myself, I've grown emotionally and mentally. It has truly changed my life for the better. The experience and the memories can never be replaced!"

If she had the chance to do it again, she would change some things. "I firmly believe that you get out of something what you put into it, and I wish I could have grown closer to more Connectors," Guidry said.

For Guidry, the most rewarding part was helping the freshmen transition to college. It is a big step and, she believes the Connectors are friendly faces that freshmen can trust and look up to. "The best part for me was the first week of school, seeing all the freshmen and being able to help them and knowing that they had someone like me and the rest of the team to come to," Guidry said.

For Layman, the best part of being a Freshman Connector was watching her groups grow during Freshman Connection and on campus. " I love seeing how all the freshmen in my groups develop into leaders and young adults on campus throughout their time here."

According to Spence, the Freshman Connection program is like no other. "Being a Connector has taught me to never place limits on yourself or other people. It truly is amazing to see what type of relationships and friendships are formed when you are forced to work with people who you otherwise would not. There is no other program that I have ever been a part of like Freshman Connection. It truly is a unique and rewarding experience," Spence said.

The Freshman Connector's job is more than acclimating new students to Northwestern; it is about showing others just what they can accomplish with determination. It is important to show new students what they can achieve in their four short years here, and the diversity and passion of the Freshman Connectors help them to get the ball rolling on their own leadership opportunities and personal growth.

"It's my senior year, and they put me on the third floor all the way at the end of the hall pass the exit doors. I've been on the first floor every year. But I go home every weekend to work. I didn't bring much this semester. I didn't have big bins to bring because I bring clothes I'm wearing for the week.

THE BEST DORM EVER

STORY Jordan Smith
PHOTOS Derrick Notice, Dariane Williams

Decorating a dorm room is no easy task. More than just a bedroom, students are decorating a bathroom, kitchenette and a living area. They also have to take into account that a dorm is used for studying and relaxing. A dorm is a home away from home on campus and most students aim for comfort when decorating.

Living on campus for three years, Clayton Carr, an English major, had his dorm set from the moment he first moved in. After trying to decorate a bit his second year, he decided to leave it simple when the products didn't work too well.

For trouble-free decorating, Carr has a set of fudogs guarding the main door from the inside. These unique statues are used to guard the household from evil. After finding them on vacation, he moved them into his dorm to coincide with his Chinese dragon figurine. The dragon, similar to the fudogs, is used to bring good luck and prosperity.

"I brought most of my stuff from home, but the coffee maker and toaster oven were top priority," Carr said. Carr avoids the stress of the dining hall with the help of his toaster oven and George Foreman grill. His tip to everyone in the dorms is to find a way to cook, as microwaves do not always suffice.

Marissa Oster, a freshman scientific inquiry major, went for style and comfort when shopping over the summer.

Aside from the store-bought necessities, Oster constructed her own headboard, making it feel a little less like the average dorm. First she bought insulation board after she looked up the correct dimensions. Once everything was measured, she cut it out and added quilt batting. The last step was stapling fabric over the batting and adding fabric pins.

"I didn't know what theme I wanted at first, but the comforter helped me with colors," Oster said. She wanted something she would love since she is going to be here for a while.

Compared to her room back home, the theme is more creative. Her colors at home were darker and more neutral, while her dorm is very bright and lively. "It's homey, but it isn't a prison cell," Oster said.

Oster's bed is her favorite item because of all the bits and pieces she added, her crafty headboard included. The three mattress toppers alone are enough to make anyone doze off after a long day of class.

Though the dorms are great for some students, the campus life doesn't sit well with everyone. NSU is able to accommodate students with the necessities, but the lack of space isn't ideal. In describing his perfect dorm, Caleb Killer, a sophomore scientific inquiry major, admitted he'd give the dorms a balcony, maybe even a fancy chandelier.

For students away from home, having their own space is comforting. Accommodating for studying and relaxing isn't as hard as it sounds, as most students balance the two pretty well. Decorating shows off their unique personalities, making no two dorm rooms the same.

The first year of college can be intimidating and overwhelming for a freshman: the classes look like they are on opposite sides of campus, gigantic alien letters are sticking out of the ground and, most importantly, even the upperclassmen do not seem to know what a "Moodle" is.

Thankfully, the Office of First Year Experience was there to help. With its team of over 60 volunteers, the First Year Experience's annual Welcome Week is a massive informational and celebration for NSU's newest batch of freshmen.

"We helped at least 100 students today," Matthew Spence, junior liberal arts major, said. "Pretty much the whole reason for Welcome Week is to help make the transition easier, to show that [the freshmen] are not alone. The first step was Freshmen Connection, now we're the second big step."

Devon Hamm, a freshmen communications major, participated in Freshmen Convocation, the pool party, the President's Picnic and the ice cream party as part of Welcome Week.

"This is the prettiest campus by far," he said. Hamm said the Welcome Week team is helpful in locating classes and that Welcome Week "helped me meet people, something I generally don't do.

Freshman theatre major Anna Rees thinks Welcome Week does a good job including every club. "There's such a wide variety for everyone," she said.

By far, the event during Welcome Week generating the most buzz was NSU's first Color Chaos. Paint was thrown left and right as students had fun and made new friends all at the same time.

John Nance, a freshmen pre-med major, a Scholars' ambassador and Kappa Alpha pledge said his favorite event was Color Chaos.

"[Color Chaos] was an exciting way to meet a large volume of people quickly! It made me feel a lot more comfortable being here," Nance said.

Overall, the first week of school is one students won't forget, especially Gabby Gomez, a freshman liberal arts major.

NEW FACES

STORY Jordan Smith
PHOTOS Kara Lee Scouten

New Faces is a tradition in the Theatre and Dance Department at NSU. The Intro to Theatre class is required to take part in New Faces, performing a song, monologue or dance ranging from 60-90 seconds. Each "new face", freshmen, transfer students and new students to the department, are given an upperclassman to coach them along their process of learning, practicing and perfecting their piece. As well as performing solo, the cast also does a group number to open and close the show. Seniors in the department help to direct and choreograph the two numbers.

For her first time solo on the main stage, Annie Dauzat chose to dance for her New Faces exhibition, though she has a musical theatre background in addition to dance. Her previous musical theatre work made the rehearsals a lot more fun, as she didn't have as much catching up to do as some of the cast. Dauzat's coach, Marlee Roberts, helped her immensely. "Marlee was fabulous, she did everything for me," Dauzat said.

Jay Canova did his monologue from Christopher Durang's play "Baby With The Bathwater" as the character Daisy. With only about three weeks to prepare, Canova chose a monologue he was familiar with and felt he related to. His coach Tyra Morrison helped him to personalize the character more. "She helped me bring out a more humanistic side of Daisy, really allowing me to become the character," Canova said.

Canova said he would definitely be willing to coach someone for monologues next year. "Acting is second nature to me, it is what I want to do with my life," Canova said.

On the coaching side, junior Hannah Williams was thrilled to be a mentor. Williams helped Braxton Hogan to choose his song, "Stranger in This World" from Taboo. As well as aiding in the decision making process, she also helped him with his stage presence and performance quality. "Braxton is incredibly talented, he just needed a little guidance to work on his confidence," Williams said.

Previously, microphones were not used, but Williams thought it was a good idea to introduce them. "In past years you couldn't hear too well, and you don't always know how loud the track is going to be," Williams said.

New Faces is more than a performance, it is a chance for the faculty to see what each student has to offer to the department. With around 40 new students to the department, it is difficult for the faulty to see their range of abilities in courses alone. Seeing the students in another discipline is also an advantage for the faculty.

Welcoming new students to the theatre department is essential, and New Faces is just what they need to become acclimated. The singers, actors and dancers are able to get to know upperclassmen in their craft. They're able to meet someone who is always willing to help. "The whole New Faces experience was such a great ice breaker. I was able to meet some pretty important people in the department, and it definitely brought me closer to my class," Canova said.

FOOD FRENZY

Recently Northwestern's Student Union underwent construction with the remodel of Vic's and the Grill 155. The reconstruction was part of the 10-year contract between Sodexo and the university.

The first part of the contract was the remodel of Iberville in 2008. The plans of the remodel of Vic's and the Grill began about two years ago.

The designing phase began in January, when student focus groups were held to get insight on the remodel. The plans were finalized around April or May, and plans went into action on June 5 with a goal of opening by the beginning of the fall semester. They actually opened the Sunday before school started.

"The first week of school opening was the first week we started running everything," General Manager Steve Kauf said. "The initial plan was to be done by August 5 so we could have about two to three weeks to train and hire." Now, Kauf said, there are more and healthier choices. Subs were the most requested food from students in the focus groups.

"The food is better," Rachel Belton, senior accounting major, said. "Vic's is nice because the set up is better for getting food, but the Grill wasn't a big improvement. It was better the way it was."

Actually, there was suppose to be more reconstruction to the Grill 155, but funds ran out, said Kauf, but the cost of the remodel was not given.

One student wasn't impressed with the remodel at all.

"No, I really don't like the new reconstruction. I don't like the block section in the middle of Vic's where students can sit. It was more of an open space before, and I hate the Grill," Ja'Trenton Gillyard, senior mass communication major, said, "and the prices went up."

"It's true, the prices have gone up. Every year our prices go up, but we try to keep it as reasonable as possible, but even subway prices go up," Kauf said.

Overall, Kauf has been getting good feedback from students, especially for the Sub Connection station and the longer hours.

"The service is better when it's not busy, and I like the longer hours so I don't have to go to the Grill," Belton said. "I can just go to Vic's, grab a sandwich and leave."

Kauf said new improvements even please the workers. "Last year everything was breaking down and old," he said, "Now, everybody's happy because it's cleaner and fresher."

Belton's favorite food is the taco salad in Vic's while Gillyard prefers fish Fridays.

ABOVE The new rearrangement to the Student Union eatery Grill 155. Students were disappointed with the finished project, but according to General Manager Steve Kauf more renovations are to be done to better improve the space.

ABOVE The New Vic's, located upstairs in the Student Union features different stations with a variety of choices including Sub Connection. Vic's also won over students by expanding their hours into the evening instead of closing at 2 p.m. like the eatery had every other semester previously.

FASHION FORWARD

STORY Jacob Labutka

In a town lacking shopping malls and designer boutiques, Natchitoches fashion results from either limited local shopping or cherished imports from far away cities. As a college town, students wear new and unique trends not otherwise seen in a place this size.

Many NSU students dress down in class with sweatpants and baggy T-shirts, but others seek to defy and change the stereotypes through carefully selected and unique outfits.

"We have so many liberties in this country and we take it for granted," senior Taj Derosier said. "I feel we should give a little more effort in the morning getting dressed because other people wish they could wear nice clothes that match."

Known for his self-created style in the classroom and at KNWD, Derosier never dresses down for a day at the office. He claims to not prescribe to a certain style but describes himself as having a contemporary musician look.

"There is a quote I live by: 'everyday you have chance to make a masterpiece, and your body is your pallet,' Derosier said.

Past the many dressed down students she sees every day, Current Sauce fashion columnist Regine Lyons notices certain trends around campus.

"A trend that I see around NSU is big sweaters being worn with leggings," Lyons said. "I think it's a super cute trend, especially since the sweaters are old school, like from our parent's and grandparent's period."

Many students also wear their school pride at the end of each week.

"There is a lot of spirit on campus," senior Aaron McConnell said. "Every Friday, it is becoming tradition to wear purple."

McConnell frequently wears his spirit on what is called Purple Priday, but he maintains a personal style throughout the school week that also reflects trends at NSU.

"I like to characterize my style as a mixture of preppy, business casual and colorful, but coordinated," he said. "The trends I see around campus are comfortable outfits: shorts and tank tops when it is hot and sweats and scarves when it gets colder."

Some students must find a fashionable balance between casual and professional. Senior Brandi Vincent's campus attire reflects her sociable, yet determined personality.

"Around campus I usually dress business casual since I work in the recruiting office and attend many meetings throughout the day," Vincent said. "Taking the time to get ready in the morning helps me to wake up and prepare for anything I'll experience throughout the day."

Being fashionable can prove difficult for college students who must be mindful of their budgets. Students like Vincent find economical ways to save but still rave about their outfits.

She shares certain articles of clothing with friends and in return they open their wardrobes up to her. Junior Taylor Nelson has loaned items like a blazer to Vincent and received other loaned items in exchange.

As both an exhilarating and stressful experience, college life must provide an outlet for students to express themselves. NSU students showcase their creative minds through their fashion and prove the possibility of being both economical and trend-setting.

While just a little over turning 3 years old, Instagram has made huge strides in social media. With over 150 million users on the platform, 16 billion photos shared, and 1 billion likes happening each day, the photo-sharing and editing platform is one of the most engaging channels on social media.

Instagram has some pretty different functionalities in comparison to other social media sites and is fundamentally based on being able to simply upload and share beautiful images instantly. Except, looking at the other capabilities, Instagram is still a platform to share things and identifying what is working and what isn't helps to determine what a specific audience craves.

While Instagram has caught the attention of many students, there are still those stuck in the past.

"I choose not get an Instagram. I like Facebook because I like to keep up with my family and friends," Matt Carroll, senior theatre major, said. And, there are those who just have no interest in Instagram. "I don't take a lot of pictures and post them," Daniel Thiels, senior mass communication major, said, "and I only feel like it's just a lot of food on there."

Nonetheless Instagram is a hit among the majority of NSU students.

WORKING FOR A CAUSE

STORY Jordan Smith

It's hard to get all of NSU's organizations together in one place, but Up Til' Dawn manages to do so, and for a great cause. Up Til' Dawn (UTD) is a huge letter writing campaign for St. Jude Children's Research Hospital that has taken place on campus for the past four years. This national event takes place on over 200 university campuses each year. Formally an independent organization, this was the first year UTD was under the Student Activities Board.

Fundraising Chair Jessica Viator chose to work with the Up Til' Dawn organization because of personal connections with St. Jude. "One of my cousins went to St. Jude, and I thought it would be a really great way to get more involved with the campus," said Viator.

It always amazes Viator just how many students come out to support the event. "This is a time in a student's life to be selfish and have fun, and it is wonderful that they are able to help others in such a big way," said Viator.

"There's No Place Like St. Jude" brought in 1,000 students to participate in the letter writing event. Students got free food, entertainment, games and competitions in exchange for 30 addresses for letters. The letters sent out give information about St. Jude and ask for donations. About $31,000 was raised directly from Northwestern's UTD event.

In addition to the philanthropic part of the evening, there were also student competitions. Competitions included a banner contest, can tab collection contest, costume contest and a table decoration contest, as well as an overall winner. This overall winner this year was Tri Sigma.

Guest speakers from St. Jude Children's Research Hospital were invited to tell students about the hospital and share their personal stories. With the stories from guest speakers, students were able to see the impact their donations and time make.

PARKING WARS

STORY Jessica Dodd

The NSU Campus Police perform many duties, including giving out parking tickets. They often focus on vehicles that are unregistered, illegally parked in faculty parking lots and illegally parked in handicapped parking spots, according to Captain Yancy Spillman of the NSU Campus Police.

Though campus parking rules and regulations can be found at www.nsula.edu, parking violations continue to occur. According to Spillman, a lot of the parking violations happen because of laziness or tardiness. He noted that there is plenty of parking if students are willing to look for it. "Residents shouldn't even drive," Spillman added.

But NSU Sophomore Ryan Golden said there isn't enough parking to accommodate NSU's student body. When asked about the parking near Prather Coliseum, Golden said, "If I really wanted to walk that far, I'd just walk from home." He went on to say, "I drive to stay out of the heat and the cold."

Confusion may also contribute to parking violations. Golden said he was given two parking tickets while parked in a dirt lot. He had assumed the area was a valid place to park because there were other cars also parked in the area.

"All lots should be labeled," Spillman said. But he acknowledged that the signs are sometimes stolen.

There are, however, some common sense rules everyone can agree on. It should be obvious why taking up a handicapped parking place is wrong, Spillman said.

The fines that accompany parking violations are also a constant. Most parking violations bring a fine of $35, according to nsula.edu. Misusing a parking permit can get you fined $150. These fines will add up if you get too many of them, and may result in a hold being put on your account, according to Spillman.

"In the real world, people are going to get parking tickets," Spillman said. But with a little patience, attention to detail and common sense, we can make the parking problem easier on the campus community and ourselves.

SEARCHING FOR THE ONE

STORY Jacob Labutka

Once upon a time in the college town of Natchitoches, thousands of college students converged on a university campus and endured the trials of dating. For many this involves courting a series of individuals until, like Goldilocks, the right one fits.

For others, however, the endeavor of finding an 'other' worth significance can be a grueling process filled with heartache and/or loneliness. Some students believe finding a date in Natchitoches is due to the power of flirtation while others believe it's a matter of luck.

For students like senior Desiree Hatten, small cities like Natchitoches lack the population necessary for prospective romantics to court someone new.

"There's so many people I'm friends with in Natchitoches that it limits the dating pool," Hatten said. "Most people have a certain group they hang out with and in a town this size it's hard to meet many people outside your immediate friend group. I'd have to actively hunt for a relationship here, and I don't have the time for that."

For a rare and lucky few, romance starts in high school and last through the demands of college life. For graduate student Sarah Giroir, her current relationship began with a series of run-ins with now senior Mike Breaux.

They met while in high school through Giroir's aunt and then later ran into each other at Campus Corner where they discovered both were there for band/colorguard auditions. In November 2009 they began dating after once again meeting at band practice, and their years of courtship resulted in a holiday proposal.

"He proposed on Christmas Eve when my family opened presents," Giroir said. "We plan on getting married in 2016 when I finish graduate school and plan to begin our life in Baton Rouge where I am from."

Other students experienced the trial and error of dating before engaging in a meaningful relationship. Senior Alex Clement never imagined meeting a guy worthwhile in a town with a small gay community.

"Dating in Natchitoches seemed impractical, and sometimes impossible," Clement said. "It was depressing at first but I told myself 'this isn't where I want to spend my life anyways so why start something here?'"

In an unlikely turn of events, Clement met Zachary Pruett while he was a senior in high school dating a mutual friend. After months of chatting and a change of circumstance when Pruett moved to NSU, they connected and began dating until they ultimately moved in together.

A year and a half later their relationship was tested when Pruett enlisted in the Army. But in the end, the decision made their bond stronger.

"The distance had made us both realize how important we are to each other," Clement said.

Whether single or not, most NSU students can agree that dating here certainly poses its challenges. For some, finding a significant other in an unexpected location like Natchitoches creates strong relationships. At the end of the day, dating experiences (or a lack thereof) gained here allow students to grow emotionally while realizing that regardless of population, relationships aren't easy to form anywhere.

ABOVE Sarah Giroir and Mike Breaux have dated since 2009. Breaux proposed to Giroir on Christmas Eve and they plan to get married in 2016.

LEFT Some students like Desiree Hatten believe the dating pool in Natchitoches is limited but try to remind themselves that there are plenty of fish in the sea.

College is a time of exploration, both inside and outside of the classroom. However, most students only have four years of higher education — and it goes by quicker than you think.

Here is a list of the things some students wish to do (or in some cases, not do) during his or her time in college.

1. "Go streaking." Justin Dansby, freshman
2. "Start a paintball organization." Jonathan Bazley, senior
3. "Go on a mission trip overseas." Kevin Brunner, junior
4. "Buy 100 chicken strips from Raising Canes." Thomas Merchant, freshman
5. "Get new boobies." Jordan Creasey, junior
6. "Don't gain the Freshman 15." Joycelyn McConnell, freshman
7. "Get a motorcycle." Tony Aeornettl, senior
8. "Decide on a major." Tara Mannon, freshman
9. "Make a big change on the school." Emilee King, freshman
10. "Climb Mount Everest." Joseph Guidry, junior
11. "Be in the Natchitoches Christmas Parade." Haley Magee, sophomore
12. "Pledge." Chris Rogers, freshman
13. "Go to Disneyworld." Jenny Hanna, senior
14. "Be on my way to becoming an established author." Emily Myers, freshman
15. "Form a family band." Cody Waagner, senior

HOMECOMING HYPE

Throughout the years, many things at Northwestern State change, but one thing that remains is the tradition of a high-energy homecoming week.

The Student Activities Board planned events to keep students entertained including some old favorites like the annual Lip-Sync competition mixed with new ones like a 5K Bubble Run.

"I was shocked to see that NSU brought a mini fair to our campus! The game booths, the mechanical bull and the rock climbing wall were so cool," she said. "My favorite part was zip lining. It was a great way to kick off homecoming!"

The annual Lip Sync competition also brought out spirit in everyone through elaborate routines and footwork. New organizations participated this year for the first time including student athletes, who were a crowd favorite.

" I definitely think the Student Athlete Organization was my favorite group," sophomore Catherine Brister said. I've never seen them in that light before and they still pulled it off."

Nothing showed off student's creative skills and school spirit more than the parade and float competition.

Floats of all sizes executed the "Forever Young" theme and took everyone back to the 90's with childhood inspired clothing, props and music.

Besides fancy floats, the parade included NSU's very own royalty, the 2013 Homecoming Honor Court. Made up of 22 students, the honor court brought prestige to the parade riding in colorful sports cars and throwing candy to the Natchitoches community.

Reigning over the honor court were Homecoming King and Queen senior Cody Waagner and junior Alayni Guidry. Both students were proud to be chosen by the students to represent NSU and were excited about riding in the parade.

Hosting the Pep Rally downtown on the riverbank of Natchitoches was Greek Life Director Natalie Laurence. Students were kept laughing and entertained as winners were announced from the banner, float and canned food competitions. The overall homecoming week winner was also announced, with Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority taking first place.

"Since I'm on the Leesville campus, I've never been to a NSU pep rally before," junior Jordan Creasey said. "The drive was so worth it, and the feel and energy from the crowd makes me more than proud to be a Demon. I can't wait for homecoming week next year."

Although the homecoming week events got the students hyped up, there was no better way to show NSU spirit than cheering during the homecoming game.

Capping off the week's festivities was the football game Saturday against Southeastern Louisiana University where the Demons lost 22-37.

Homecoming was not only for the current students. Alumni came back to take part in the festivities for homecoming game day, too. The football game was not the only aspect that drew alumni home. Fraternity and sorority alumni members visited their Greek house and current members.

No matter what organization or event a student was involved in, they will always cherish the memories they created at homecoming.

"Being Homecoming King was an awesome experience," Waagner said. He described the feeling of walking across the field as surreal and enjoyed being presented in front of his family and friends.

"It was an honor to be named NSU's Homecoming King."

This year marked the 25th annual Christmas Gala as combined talents of Mrs. H.D. Dear Sr. and Alice E. Dear School of Creative and Performing Arts put on yet another wonderful show through the spirit of music, acting and dancing.

The three-day-long event, comprised of many CAPA students, featured the Natchitoches-Northwestern Symphony Orchestra, the NSU choirs, NSU Department of Theater and Dance, the NSU Jazz Orchestra, NSU Rockettes, NSU Percussion Ensemble, The Out-on-a-Limb Improv Troup, and various other theater, music and dance majors.

The performers got little to no rest as this was one of the most important times of the year for some students. Many dreamed of participating in such a thrilling event, whether it was backstage helping do makeup, or up front in center stage doing ballet.

With past favorites from the Toy Soldiers to the Percussion, many people were excited to see another performance.

A digital organ donated to the performance by Rogers Organ Company brought the sounds of a real pipe organ to the Gala, enhancing this year's performance. Along with that were new numbers from the "Nutcracker Suite."

The Christmas Gala was a special and moving experience for the cast and audience all around and one to be remembered for years to come.

ALL OF THE LIGHTS

For the last 87 years, residents and students in Natchitoches have prepared for Christmas in their own special way with fireworks, events and, of course, lights.

People come from around the country to get a taste of the annual Christmas Festival, but students are able to enjoy not only the big festivities, but also the tiny, special moments of the season.

This year was even more special being that it was the 300th anniversary of Natchitoches.

Along with the 300,000 Christmas lights and 100 lit set pieces, residents, students and visitors were able to watch fireworks displayed each Saturday throughout the season. The Christmas Festival fireworks show was the largest show during the season.

"My favorite part of the Christmas Festival is the fireworks every weekend," junior Brooke Evans said.

Carriage tours through the historic district and late night hours at Front Street restaurants and shops provided the opportunity to fully experience Natchitoches.

Before the big firework display, numerous NSU student organizations, including the band and spirit groups, joined local high school students, pageant winners, and visiting bands and marched in the parade starting on campus, down front street and back up second street.

Evans, a native of Natchitoches, reigned as Miss Merry Christmas in 2011 and describes riding in the parade as a "great experience," and one she would "recommend to anybody" if they "have the opportunity."

Besides just Christmas celebrations, the Christmas season also marked the end of the fall semester. Finals and packing up to visit hometown family and friends made this a busy time for students.

Even with all the Christmas excitement and activities, students still found a way to enjoy the time of year.

ABOVE A staple of the Natchitoches Christmas Festival, the weekly fireworks draw hundreds of viewers of all ages every year.

IT TAKES A LADY TO WEAR A BRACELET

PHOTOS Kara Scouten

The 56th annual Miss Northwestern Lady of the Bracelet pageant featured a wealth of talent and student involvement, something Northwestern prides itself on. Historically, the Potpourri sponsored the pageant until it was taken over by the Student Activities Board. This year's contestants brought out the best of Northwestern displaying knowledge, poise and purpose. Contestants started with the swimsuit competition, moved on to the talent portion of the evening and finally the on-stage question and evening wear. NSU's Jazz Orchestra, Make Your Own Theatre and Glee Club provided entertainment throughout the night. Northwestern is a place where everyone can get involved, and that's just what new Lady of the Bracelet, junior Liberal Arts major Taylor Layman from Baton Rouge, loves about her school.

How did you prepare for the pageant?
Layman: I prepared for the Lady of the Bracelet pageant by sticking with my normal exercise routine of two hours per week, but I enhanced my figure by eating healthfully a few months prior to the pageant. I gathered my wardrobe from various websites, friends (borrowed clothes are the best clothes!) and boutiques. I studied the current events of 2013 and the most talked about figures in the news for 2013 and met with Dr. Davina McClain for help with controversial issues and interview questions.

Have you done pageants before?
Layman No, Lady of the Bracelet was my very first pageant!! How cool that I was able to bring home the crown and the bracelet after my first try!

What can pageants teach women and young girls?
Layman Pageants can teach women that every female is beautiful and special in her own way. Intelligence does not discriminate against age, race or social status, and participating in this pageant has helped me realize just how powerful a woman's mind can be. Also, the swimwear competition is the element I find most empowering to women who participate in pageants. While it takes a lot of courage to wear a swimsuit in front of your peers, especially with the way media represents skinny as beauty, which is certainly not always true, a woman can gain confidence and be happy with herself knowing she is proud to wear a two-piece!

Did you learn anything about yourself from competing?
Layman While it was my first pageant, I learned that I can actually hang with the girls I've always looked up to. It's amazing to know that you have accomplished something that every little girl dreams of. It's just a matter of putting your dreams into action!

You've represented NSU in so many ways, how is being Miss LOB a different representation?
Layman While I love every opportunity that I'm given to represent Northwestern State, I think that the title of Miss Lady of the Bracelet will help me to make a lasting impression about Northwestern to other college students. Oftentimes, I represent NSU around campus to students who are about to attend or already do attend school here. I'm excited to be able to show other women in the state what a true NSU Demon is all about! I can't wait to share my passion for our university with others!

Beginning in 1956 and continuing the tradition today, Mr. and Miss NSU remain the highest honors a student can receive from their peers. SGA hosts the election each fall allowing NSU students to elect two of their peers. Mr. and Miss NSU are presented annually at an NSU home football game. These two students can be seen at other university events and activities throughout the year.

"I feel honored to be Mr. NSU. It was definitely a humbling experience when I found out that I won," Favis said.

"I felt very humble and honored that so many people felt like I deserved the position," Babu said. "I was shocked."

Life as NSU's own royalty has been an experience. Babu laughs as she thinks about how much she gets "picked on" now.

"No, I'm joking. It has changed in a way that more people know me now. They will recognize me and say hello, like 'Oh, hey Miss NSU.'

Winning Mr. NSU has taught Favis about the importance of getting involved and being social on campus. "Get the most out of your college experience," he says.

"It can't do anything but help you better yourself."

The life of a dean is often vastly different from what students imagine and from what the stern portraits of academic superiority portray. Underneath the serious exterior, mountains of textbooks and in between meetings and lectures, is a caring intellectual committed to the university's growth.

The love for students is shown through the work deans do, especially Dr. Davina McClain who stepped down this year as director of the Louisiana Scholar's College, the state's designated honors college. McClain decided to step down and return to teaching full time.

Dr. Curt Phifer was named interim director of the Louisiana Scholars' College at Northwestern State University. Phifer, a professor of biology, is serving while a national search for a permanent director to replace McClain occurred.

It would seem that the job of a dean is an all-encompassing job with many responsibilities and headaches, but everything leads back to the university and the students.

No matter the field of study or department, their schedule or background, each dean remains committed to his or her own academic community.

Northwestern State University has been dedicated to education for over a hundred years now. And not willing to stay idle in the northwestern corner of Louisiana, NSU spread its devotion to knowledge. NSU isn't just in Natchitoches anymore. In fact, it hasn't just been in Natchitoches for decades.

Northwestern State also offers an opportunity for education at satellite locations, including Leesville, Shreveport and Alexandria. In addition to academics, these centers are also developing student life programs. The Nursing Education Center, located in Shreveport, provides the educational environment for nursing majors enrolled in clinical courses as well as general education courses.

The Northwestern State University CENLA Campus Center serves the central Louisiana area with select degree programs through the Learning Center for Rapides Parish (LCRP). The LCRP is a consortium of postsecondary institutions partnering to expand educational offerings in the area. The academic facility is located within the England Industrial Airpark & Community in Alexandria and is easily accessible to major highways connecting the various parishes of central Louisiana.

NSU-Leesville/Fort Polk is located midway between Leesville and Fort Polk on Highway 467. The center occupies 160 acres and houses 30,000 square feet of classroom and administrative office space. The Leesville/Fort Polk campus serves the civilian communities of Vernon, Beauregard and Sabine parishes, as well as the military community at Fort Polk. In addition to providing the first two years of preparation for almost any degree NSU offers, NSU-Leesville/Fort Polk students can earn the complete degrees solely on this campus.

Northwestern State University admitted their first baccalaureate nursing students in 1949. Over the past six decades, more than 7, 000 students have received degrees from the NSU College of Nursing, making it the oldest state supported nursing program in Louisiana. During the summer of 2010, the College of Nursing was redefined and the College of Nursing and Allied Health.

In the mid 1940's, the visionary nursing community in Shreveport recognized the need for a collegiate-based nursing program. Following the recommendations of a national consultant, five hospitals agreed to phase out their diploma programs opening the door for Northwestern State University to create a Bachelor of Science in Nursing (BSN) program.

Following many successful years of offering nursing courses over a large geographic area, the College of Nursing consolidated its clinical campuses to Shreveport in 1970. Two years later, it initiated two new programs, the Associate Degree and the Master's of Science in Nursing.

The College of Arts, Letters, Graduate Studies and Research provides a superior undergraduate education in the social and behavioral sciences, languages, communication, English and the creative and performing arts.

Due to the number of programs, the College of Arts, Letters, Graduate Studies and Research is the largest college within the university. The aspect that stands out most about the college is the diversity among the degrees offered through one college. One can receive a degree in social work, while the next student receives their degree in performing arts. There are a number of opportunities available for almost everyone.

A relatively new degree program offered at NSU is a Bachelor's in Communication. Concentrations in the degree program include organizational communication, rhetoric communication and mass communication.

The program focuses on preparing students for the professional world by teaching them techniques to communicating. This degree program is versatile and appeals to students of vast interests.

A mass communication degree wasn't Regine Lyons, a senior mass communication major's, first choice. She was originally a business major.

"I did not like it. It was hard," Lyons said. It wasn't until Fundamentals of Speech, or Communication 1010 that she realized how much she liked to talk in front of people and being the center of attention. Once she changed her major, she realized she was a better writer than she thought. She doesn't visit her advisor or professors often, but she knows she can depend on them for anything at any time. "Once I ran into Dr. Foster, and he actually got on to me about getting an internship," Lyons said, "and he's not even my advisor."

Also housed in the College of Arts and Letters are the Criminal Justice Department, the Department of Psychology, the Department of Social Work and the School of Creative and Performing Arts.

CAPA is one of the more public departments in this college, where everything CAPA does is publicized. Students work hard at art, dance, music and theatre, where support of the university and the Natchitoches community is shown.

In the school of CAPA, students study music performance and education, graphic design, costume design, stage direction, musical theatre, set design, studio art and more. Huge performances are put on by the School of CAPA, one of the biggest being the Christmas Gala.

Upon graduation Gracyn Migues, a freshman vocal music education major, plans to become an elementary vocal teacher. To get to that point, she takes recital classes and has choir concerts. She said the faculty (the vocal staff) helps her learn the music back and forth. Migues said Dr. Joy always greets students with a smile and is ready to help. "If you need help with figuring something out, she's always there," Migues said. Music is her passion, and she's been singing for as long as she can remember. "It's the only thing I know," Migues said.

"I adore CAPA and all the people in it. They're very supportive. It has become my home."

Northwestern State University admitted its first undergraduate nursing students in 1949, according to www.nursing.nsula.edu. Today the College of Nursing and Allied Health offers multiple degree programs in the field of nursing and radiological science including a master of science in nursing.

The main campus for the program is located in Shreveport, according to Director of Student Services at Nursing and Allied Health, Debbie Moore.

In the 1940's there was no educational program for nursing in the area. So a group of hospitals in Shreveport formed a coalition to fill this void. NSU later took over this coalition and made it into a bachelor's of science in nursing program.

The Shreveport and Bossier area has a lot of facilities for nursing and rad science, said Moore. Students are allowed to work in the hospitals and care for patients, but faculty are always present.

NSU Senior Christina Graham is a nursing student at NSU's campus in Shreveport. "I was prior military and I retrained into EMT," Graham said, "I realized that I wanted to be a nurse so I looked at the programs."

NSU is one of the top nursing schools in the state, according to Graham, who said she is being well prepared for her future career as a nurse.

"As far as our local community around here, they always look for the Northwestern graduates. We're taught the real nursing way rather than just text books."

The Gallaspy College of Education and Human Development is an education program designed to prepare teachers and personnel for a K-12 environment upon graduation. One thing all education majors have in common is passion for their major.

"I love being an education major because it's really needed in the world," George Spivey, freshman elementary education major, said. "Especially more male educators to help equip our young people with everything they need to know," Spivey said.

The college also helps prepare students for work in a health, wellness and athletic setting. The college helps students prepare specifically for careers such as: sports administrators, health trainers and health educators.

"After college, I plan on becoming a high school football coach," Jamal Harrell, freshman secondary education major, said. "Football has always been one of my passions and the thought of being able to teach and coach has always been a dream of mine. Knowing I can get the best of both worlds in my program really makes me feel prepared for the future," Harrell said.

One thing every major can agree on is how much the college has helped them grow.

"Being an education major is one of the most enjoyable things I have gotten into. It takes a lot of time, but it is so worth it," Tamara Sellers, sophomore secondary education major, said. The Scholars' College strives to make students more open-minded and teaches them to think critically. Most classes are seminar based, not just lectures. Sitting in a classroom while the professor talks is not how the college operates, as every class is open to discussion. But more than academics, many students have found a second family in Natchitoches with their classmates and faculty.

"I've made life-long friends and formed a real bond with my professors," junior Olivia Doucet said. Doucet recruits for the university, and helps students make the decision to come to Natchitoches. "I learn so much from the students. Even just sitting in the lounge, I learn something new every day," Doucet said.

The classes keep her interested, but it is the people that keep her here. "Scholars' has taught me so much. I would not have met all these great people or be as open-minded without Scholars'," Doucet said.

Sophomore Justin Vance did not come ready for the Scholars' College right out of high school, as most students cannot be fully prepared for the curriculum. He stayed on his own academically in high school, but the professors helped him to succeed here.

Asking for help creates the first step of success in the Scholars' College, and most new students don't realize this soon enough.

One thing Scholars' taught Vance is that it's okay to not know everything. "It's part of life to have that time where you don't know anything. Everyone experiences this, but the Scholars' College helps you grow and strengthen from it," Vance said.

The Graduate School at Northwestern State University offers master's programs in a variety of fields including education, psychology and medicine, according to their website, www.graduateschool.nsula.edu.

Many of the programs are online, Vice Provost and Dean of the College of Arts, Letters, Graduate Studies and Research, Steve Horton said. At least 25% of the degree program can be acquired online.

The college recently introduced its first doctorate program, the Doctor of Nursing Practice, said Horton. This program allows NSU's graduate program to become more competitive with other schools.

Undergraduate school is different from graduate school, Counseling Program Coordinator Gerra Perkins said. Undergraduate work is broader and deals with a lot of things that have nothing to do with your major.

"Graduate school is really honed down to what you're interested in," said Perkins. Graduate school goes deeper with what you've learned in undergraduate school, Horton said.

The Graduate School program is growing, according to Jessica Adams, who graduated from NSU's graduate program in December. "When I got into the program it was a 48 hour track. In the middle of the program we had the opportunity to switch from a 48 hour track to a 60 hour track," Adams said.

This year, the Graduate School took its first steps toward receiving accreditation from the Council for Accreditation of Counseling and Related Educational Programs (CACREP), Horton said. "We didn't have any deficiencies," Horton added, "There would hopefully be no reason for them not to approve accreditation based on our favorable on site visit."

The program hopes to add a doctorate program in Homeland Security in the future, Horton said. "We're moving in the direction of certification programs," he added.

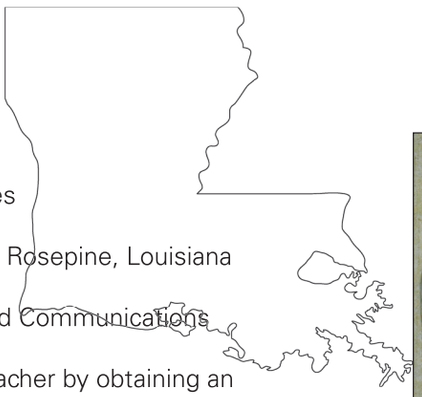
There are many benefits and challenges that coincide with being enrolled in online courses. It is a struggle just as traditional courses are, but there is more flexibility when having an assignment complete and ready to turn in. Due to this benefit many of those who chose to be fully online students can be a student, which is a challenge in itself, while also achieving other important obligations such as a family or career. These stories of our fellow classmates and NSU Demons show that whether they are near or far they are pursuing the same goals and achievements we are here on campus. These Demons deserve the spotlight because though they face tough everyday situations they still strive for a better tomorrow.

Name: Melissa Leahigh
From: North Carolina
Currently located in: Hawaii
Classification: Graduate Student
Major: English

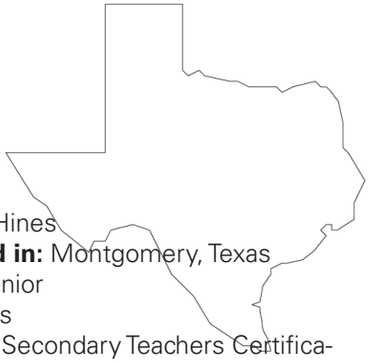
Leahigh's view on taking online classes: "I do believe that online studies will help me achieve my goals, however, I feel that being an online student severely limits my goals inside my major. I have noticed that the same five-seven course are offered during each semester for my major in an online capacity, although there are many courses listed in the course catalog that I have never seen offered. Because my husband is active duty, we are prone to moving every few years. I knew that online was the best medium to reach my goal of a Masters."

Overview: Leahigh is a 35-year-old online only student and found out about NSU by simply completing an online search. She chose NSU because of the options NSU has on receiving a degree completely online. She was a military kid who moved after spending 12 years in Guam to North Carolina. She became a military spouse and is now a resident of and stationed in Hawaii.



Name: Amanda James
From: Oklahoma
Currently located in: Rosepine, Louisiana
Classification: Junior
Major: Media Arts and Communications
Minor: English
Plans to become a teacher by obtaining an alternative certification.
View on taking online classes: " I feel online classes are helpful for non-traditional students like myself, I have three children who demand I have a somewhat flexible schedule, I also cannot move us all to campus so, minimizing the number of times I have to drive to campus is very cost effective for my family. I have two semesters left after this fall. Without online courses it would be very difficult for me to complete any degree, as I have noticed many campus classes do not make any special considerations for non-traditional's and our complicated schedule demands."

Overview: James had worked as a massage therapist in Oklahoma but after moving to Louisiana did not find that the economy benefited her passion. She then decided to enroll in online classes and continue a previous degree from a junior college she attended in Oklahoma After researching both McNeese and NSU campuses, James felt that NSU was a more organized university and thus a better choice.



Name: Christina Hines
Currently located in: Montgomery, Texas
Classification: Junior
Major: Liberal Arts
Plans to pursue a Secondary Teachers Certification in English.
View on taking online classes: "I work full-time during the weekdays and found that local schools offered classes on-line but not every single class required for the degree. So I would eventually have to attend class at night or leave work a couple of times a week during the day. Because I am a single mom of a three-year old, that is not a feasible option for me. This program is going to help me finish school when I wouldn't have been able to attend traditional classes."

Overview: Hines has previously achieved an associate's degree in Criminal Justice the traditional way with face-to-face classes. With required classes already on Hines's transcript for the Liberal Arts College, she is currently taking 12 hours to pursue her Bachelor of Arts degree. Her mother, who was a clinical nursing instructor for NSU, introduced her the NSU online program. Also, given the fact by her mother that NSU did not charge out of state tuition, won Hines over.

DREAM*JOBS*

STORY Jessica Blow

On average, a college student spends approximately 17 years in school. After spending most of their youth studying, taking tests and sitting in classrooms, students eventually get to spend the rest of their lives doing what they have worked so hard for.

Dallas Guillory, freshman biology major, wants to embalm bodies and fulfill her dream of becoming a mortician.

"I thought of a job that I could do for years, and I wouldn't want to retire," she said. It's a job that seemed easy to her.

Guillory hasn't put much thought into her location, but she wants to live near a beach that has no hurricanes. Before she decides where to relocate, she will do plenty of research. "I will research whether the city is big or small because I want to live in a big city," Guillory said. On the side, Guillory also wants to pursue her dream of acting in a small theatre. "I'm thinking to minor in theatre next semester once I get more adjusted."

Not all students have the guts to look at dead bodies everyday, and would rather take a more relaxed route of reading and writing.

"My dream job is to run my own Dawn Gazette magazine company," Brittany Bonton, senior mass communication major, said. The name Dawn Gazette was inspired from her middle name. "I want to write, and I want to write about celebrity news," Bonton said.

Bonton wants people to read her articles and feel what she is trying to say. Starting off, she plans to work in radio or writing newspaper articles. Her dream is to relocate to California or Florida. "My sister lived in California," Bonton said. "She said the weather is always nice." Bonton also wants to start her own organization where she helps college students pay for college.

Some students prefer a more intense job. Tyler Cooley is a history and English major, with a passion for law. "My dream job is to be an attorney." But, Cooley hasn't quite figured out what field of law he wants to practice just yet. "That will be a decision I will make once I get into law school," Cooley said. He has no clue where he wants to live, and will allow his job to decide that for him. Cooley may be indecisive about where he wants to start life after college, but one thing he is sure about; starting a relationship or family is a long-term goal.

Regis Perry, sophomore, wants to be a probation officer. He wants to help others change their lives. To pursue his dream, Perry is majoring in criminal justice. He is also planning to add a second major in mass communication. "I would like to have my own radio show," Perry said.

Before starting a family of his own, he wants to make life easier for his immediate family, especially his autistic brother. After graduation and his family members are taken care of, Perry would like to hit the road. "One of my main goals is to travel around the United States, but I don't know exactly where I want to live."

No matter the field, every student's journey is unique and the long years of studying and hard work make reaching his or her goals that much sweeter.

After many long nights in the library and what seemed like millions of tests, the day anxious students waited for had finally arrived. Hundreds of people watched and cheered as the Alma Mater played and NSU graduates walked across stage to receive their degrees.

Right after the commencement ceremonies the graduates are met with warm faces and open arms from friends and family. They pose for pictures smiling as they hold the first step to making their dreams come true between their fingers.

With all the joy graduation brings, it also brings overwhelming emotion. After four or more years of hard work students have a hard time accepting that their time at NSU is over.

"Graduating from NSU was a great experience," Fall 2013 Graduate Rahkeem Mitchell said. "All my hard work finally paid off as I enjoyed those few seconds walking across the stage as my name was called."

Thrown into the real world, long gone are the days of classes, parties and sleeping in. The fun times are replaced with job hunting and résumé building. Graduates remember on this day that more has occurred than just passing classes and climbing the classification ladder. Lessons learned and life long friendships have been formed.

Graduates will forever bleed purple and white.

From Turpin Stadium to the classroom, NSU is full of school spirit. Students enjoy painting faces, tailgating and making crafty signs.

"Tailgating at the football games is what it's all about," Justin Dansby, a freshman accounting major, said. "Getting painted up and cheering on my team is always a great way to start the weekend off," Dansby added.

Not only can students express their Demon pride at games, but also in the classroom.

"I love Purple Pridays," Jordan Creasey, junior general studies major said. "Wearing purple every Friday is a great tradition. It makes me feel unified with everyone at NSU, even if we don't know each other," Creasey said.

Demons not only show their school spirit on game day or on Purple Pridays, but throughout each semester at NSU. Demons do not only show school spirit, they also show pride.

No NSU football game is complete without spirit groups cheering on the team, the marching band firing up the audience, Vic the Demon and the pre-game tailgate. The smells of charcoal and barbecue with the music of various bands are consistent trademarks. Many students aren't even aware that NSU, normally a dry campus, lifts the ban on alcohol for 24 hours during football games and tailgates.

Campus organizations, alumni and even local companies set up tents to celebrate impending Demon football matches. Around 20-30 organizations normally set up tents in the Columns Pavilion.

Hosted by the NSU Alumni Association, tailgating attracts both current and long-graduated Demon fans.

"Alumni response is always phenomenal," Assistant Director of Alumni & Development Vanner Erickson said.

As an office of eight people, the Alumni Association always has its hands full preparing for the next tailgate.

"It's a whole office endeavor," Erickson said. "It's all of us, including student workers. It takes all of us to pull it off."

The work of the Alumni Association results in tailgates that many regularly attend. But some students come not only to support the football team, but also their campus organizations.

"I tailgate for every game," sophomore Kayla Logue said. "I love seeing my friends at all the different tailgating tents."

Others take advantage of hearing live music and being introduced to new bands.

"The music was really good at tailgating," senior Rebecca Lefante said. "But I was confused as to why they would get a band from D.C. rather than a local band."

Although every tailgate is well attended, the most popular one is always before Homecoming. This year it drew several hundred students, residents and alumni wanting to celebrate the end of an event-filled week.

Some students and organizations used the Homecoming tailgate to further their involvement in campus life.

"I'm not a regular tailgater but wanted to help get the Scholars' College more involved on campus," Scholars' Forum Council member Rivers Berryhill said. "This was definitely a new experience for all of us. We had a decent turnout, and I think for the next game we'll see even more people."

Tailgating at NSU depends on the support of the Alumni Association and the attendance of spirit-filled students and alumni to create an atmosphere Demons keep coming back for.

You can say that the Demons finished with an average record this season (6-6 overall, 3-4 Southland Conference), but if you keep up with Demon football, then you know that this is an improvement and a big step for the team.

The team started the season with a positive, winning their first two games against the Missouri State Bears and the Southern Jaguars in stellar performances.

They hit two bumps in the road whey they lost to FBS schools in the Cincinnati Bearcats (66-9) and Alabama Birmingham Blazers (52-28).

Coming back home, the Demons handled the Langston Lions with ease (37-0), going one game up in the win column and were poised to make competition fierce.

Things seemed to be going well as the Demons were headed into Southland Conference play. Then, all of a sudden, the team lost three straight games.

The season looked as though it was going to be a cliché of previous seasons, but that wasn't the case this time.

The Demons turned things around and it started when they defeated the Central Arkansas Bears (31-28) who were ranked in the FCS ranking polls at the time.

From that game on, the Demons finished won three of their last four games, including their thrashing at the end of the season against rival Stephen F. Austin (40-27).

"Good feeling and good way to end the season," junior defensive tackle Deon Simon said. "We've made big steps, especially this year."

"It was a big improvement and we really improved and matured as a team," senior defensive end Keland Johnson said.

The Demons have just begun their journey on the path to success, and talking with players, they feel that they will most definitely continue this trend.

BATTLE FOR CHIEF CADDO

STORY Michael Johnson

After five grueling years of losing to nemesis Stephen F. Austin, the Demon football team finally pummeled the Lumberjacks and reclaimed the 7-foot-6-inch, 320-pound statue of Chief Caddo, which is the biggest trophy in college sports.

Even though first year head coach Jay Thomas is very familiar with this rivalry from his days as assistant head coach and defensive line coach from 2010 and 2011, Thomas wasn't going to let statistics or his familiarity with the rivalry fool him into thinking that the Lumberjacks wouldn't come prepared.

"Throw records out," Thomas said. "It's about this one game. This game is positive energy for both programs. It's going to be fun for the guys."

The Demons took control of the game and never looked back. They jumped out to an early two score lead in the first half 37-24, to keep ahead of the Lumberjacks.

Despite giving up 465 yards of total offense, the defense made adjustments in the second half and held the Lumberjacks to 120 total yards and two field goals, which one of them missed.

Another factor that played into a victory for the Demons was winning time of possession. They held the ball for 21 of the 30 minutes after halftime, and limited the Lumberjacks to running only 23 plays while they were able to run 43.

This was a must win game not just for the team, but also for the seniors on this team.

"Really something to fight for," senior defensive end Keiland Johnson said. "I haven't seen the trophy since I got here and it's good to end the season on a good note."

"It's just an awesome feeling," senior safety Bert White said. "We never gave up and came out with a winning record to end the season."

The Demons have taken a step forward as far as making progress toward the future. The team has one goal in common and that's to be successful and they think that this trend of winning will continue.

CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

Northwestern State University Demon basketball celebrated its centennial season under head coach Mike McConathy, who became the winningest men's basketball coach in Louisiana history. The Demons finished 23-9, 15-3 overall, winning the Southland Conference Tournament championship, as they made their third berth to the NCAA Tournament.

"Last year's team had excellent quality, they won and competed extra hard, which gave them the chance to be in the conference championship," McConathy said.

An exciting season it was, as they had the second-most wins in a season ever at Northwestern. The Demons ranked among the nation's top 100 teams in 11 NCAA statistical categories, including finishing second nationally in scoring (at 80 points per game) and sixth in steals (9.8 per game).

Due to their successful season running what McConathy would call "the system," the Demons had multiple players who won individual awards. DeQuan Hicks won Newcomer of the Year while Jalen West was awarded Freshman of the Year, also getting selected as one of the five players for the All-Defensive Team. Seniors Shamir Davis and James Hulbin names were mentioned as they were selected to be on the Preseason All-Southland Team. Both Hicks and Hulbin were also voted to the All-SLC second team, while Davis made the third team for the second consecutive season.

McConathy topped an "interesting year," making his way into the history book. While starting the basketball program at Bossier Parrish Community College, he accounted for 352 career victories in over 16 seasons. Coach McConathy then won 223 more here at Northwestern making his career total 575 all-time wins. In tribute to his state record, he was presented with a banner that now hangs in Prather Coliseum, above where the Demon team sits during games.

"I had a special opportunity to coach such a good team," McConathy said. The Demons capped a remarkable centennial season in Austin, Texas, as they competed against the third-seeded Florida Gators. The Demons played a tough game but McConathy still feels like it was a "bad matchup," as they came up short.

"You have to understand who you are, where you are, and what you're about," McConathy said with hopes of making it further into the tournament his next go around.

Freshmen guards Janelle Perez and Keisha Lee led the Lady Demons to a turnaround season, doubling the wins and almost tripling the conference wins from last season.

The Lady Demons (12-18, 7-11) managed to make it to the conference tournament while finishing eighth in their conference. This was the team's first season under co-head coaches Brooke and Scott Stoehr, a husband/wife combo whose first goal was to change the culture of the Lady Demon basketball program.

"This year was all about laying down a foundation on what we want the program to be. We want to get the players on a certain level, set standards and hold them accountable for the work that they do," Stoehr said.

The team, being very young, was consisted of one senior, one junior, two sophomores and five freshmen. Among those freshmen were Keisha Lee, who averaged about 15.5 points per game and Janelle Perez, who was the winner of the Southland Conference Freshman of the Year.

On winning the award, Perez described it as "great honor," but said that it was "non-expected."

"I don't play for the awards, I come out do all that I can that will help our team win," Perez said.

Lee described the season as being "okay" to her, due to the fact that she had two new head coaches. "They make it very easy, they play off each other really well and I learned their coaching styles quickly," Lee said.

Stoehr refers to Lee and Perez as "consistent players," as they both carried the offense, eclipsing the 1,000-minute mark and were the only freshman tandem in the country to do that.

Another player who played a big role during the season was center Jasmine Upchurch. Stoehr said that Upchurch was a "strong inside presence," as she came up big on more than several occasions. Lee stated that she was yet, "another player who wanted to win."

Perez led the conference's freshmen in assists and free throw percentage, but came second in points to her teammate Keisha Lee.

"The season was scary, but they prevailed and established themselves," Stoehr says. With momentum and a longer depth chart, the Lady Demons look forward to having a better season next year. "Less sleep and more gray hairs," Stoehr said to describe their next season.

The 2013 season for the Lady Demons Soccer Team didn't quite live up to the success that they hoped to have.

They finished this past season with a record of 7-11 overall and 5-6-1 in Southland Conference.

The start of the season was a rough one for the Lady Demons as they began against Texas State University in which they loss 1-3.

This started a trend of three consecutive losses to tough conference competition like the Baylor Bears, Ole Miss Rebels and Louisiana Lafayette before they won their first game of the season to the Jackson State Tigers 1-0.

While the season didn't turn out like the Lady Demons hope for, they still finished out strong by winning their final game against Texas A&M Corpus Christi 3-0.

Freshmen sensation Brooke Eastburg and senior Ashlee Savona were the leaders in shots, goals and points scored.

The real accomplishment was the Lady Demons having nine players make it on the Southland Academic Honor Roll.

Posting 4.0 GPA's were Danielle Harding, Yanci Johnson, Chandler Mason, Joanna McFarling, Peyton Rector, Mackenna Richardson, Chelsea Schafer, Bailey Stengler and Jackie Strug.

Although winning isn't everything, for student athletes having success in the classroom is always a bonus.

Swinging for the fences is what the Lady Demons Tennis Team did this season to give a sign of great things to come in 2014.

The Lady Demons went 14-8 overall and 6-3 in Southland Conference.

The start of the season was a challenge for the team as they faced number 45 ranked LSU in the first game, where they lost 3-4.

After that, the Lady Demons started to pile up victories. During two stretches of the season, the team had four consecutive wins.

The last game of the season they had a daunting task of facing a top 10 Intercollegiate Ranked Team as they played ninth ranked Alabama. The Lady Demons lost 0-4.

Despite that, they are still one of the top two teams in the SLC.

There were many talented players for the team and Sophomore Natalya Krutova and Junior Tatiana Larina were part of that discussion.

Krutova went 14-7 individually while Larina went 16-5.

"Big accomplishment", Lariana said. "Not everyone has an opportunity to get a scholarship. I'm glad coach recruited us playing international because it's really hard. It's been a dream to come here since I was 14 or 15."

With all of the immense talent on the team, the future is expected by many to be a great one for the Lady Demons.

"Think it was a good year, but we could strive to be better", Krutova said. "Really expect to have a great season and great comparison to see where we stand."

It was a great season for the Lady Demons Volleyball team as they reached the pinnacle of success.

The 2013 season showed that the Lady Demons will be a force to be reckoned with in the games to come going 21-12 overall and 15-3 in Southland Conference.

The season started off shaky for the Lady Demons as they lost their first four games of the season against Arkansas Razorbacks (0-3), Missouri-Kansas City (0-3), New Mexico (0-3) and Texas State Bobcats (1-3).

Adversity struck the team, but it didn't take long for the Lady Demons to pull off a mirage of victories, including having multiple four plus game winning streaks throughout the season.

They finished the regular season by defeating rival Stephen F. Austin 3-1 and headed into the conference tournament with a full head of steam.

In the Southland Conference Tournament, the Lady Demons had victories over McNeese State Cowgirls (3-0) and Houston Baptist (3-0) before losing to Central Arkansas (2-3) in third round.

Although the Lady Demons Volleyball team didn't win it all, they have a pool of talent surrounding them and great coaching as well.

The Demons started off the baseball season with high promise, but due to injury saw their season plummet. They finished 5-22 in Southland Conference and 16-40 overall.

Junior Steven Spann led the team in pitching with a 2.30 earned run average. Senior Will Watson, who started 49 of the 51 games he played in, led the team in batting with a .310 batting average.

"This was our first year and we had to play a really tough schedule," Coach Lane Burroughs said. "Pitching was our strength. We just had a couple of key injuries during league play. You have to score three or four runs to win."

Even though they didn't finish the way they wanted to, expectations are high as Burroughs and his staff brought in a class for 2014 that features 11 freshmen and 13 junior transfers that was mentioned in Baseball America's recruiting ranks along with Southland Conference teams Nicholls State and Texas A&M Corpus Christi.

"We're going to write a new story and we are committed to winning," Burroughs said. "It's all about recruiting. Our staff is committed and we want to make it cool to be at Northwestern."

Pitching in baseball is like being the quarterback in football. So it's no wonder Burroughs makes an emphasis on pitching.

"We're very experienced on the mound," Burroughs said. "We have depth and athleticism."

Last season for Northwestern Demon softball, the Lady Demons brought a winning record and look to build on top of that in the near future.

In 2013, the Lady Demons finished off 40-15 overall and 18-7 in Southland Conference play. The beginning of the season gave promise that it would be good one for the Lady Demons as they blanked both Mississippi Valley State (6-0) and Southeast Missouri State (8-0).

With success, there was adversity as the team experienced challenges.

"When coach gave an inspirational speech at Louisiana Tech after getting shutout (5-0), we came a long way and then it got better," Junior Cassandra Barefield said.

The Lady Demons finished off the regular season defeating Sam Houston State (5-4) and they went into NCAA Championships with a lot of confidence behind them.

"We're small in numbers, which brought us together," Senior Infielder Cali Burke said. "If one person was off, then the whole team was."

In the Tournament Regionals, which were held in Baton Rouge, the Lady Demons lost both of their matchups to Louisiana Lafayette (0-3) and Central Connecticut State (1-9).

Standout players like senior infielder Tara Mckenney, who started all 55 games at shortstop while earning All Southland Second Team Honors and SLC All-Tournament team, led the team in batting with .363 average. She hit 70 balls, which is first on the team while having four doubles and 23 RBI.

The Lady Demons went into the 2014 season with hopes of winning big; but with every great team there comes unity and togetherness.

"If everybody comes together, we can get the job done," freshmen Amanda Fulkerson said.

"Keep it going. Pick up where we left off," Barefield said. "Show people what we can do."

The men's track and field season ended in many surprises as their legendary coach Leon Johnson retired after coaching 31 seasons of cross country and track and field.

"It was a big surprise to see to see Coach Johnson leave," All-America Gabriel White said. "He always taught us to follow after seniors and don't peak too soon."

During his last season, the Demons had five competitors who earned All-America honors at the end of the season. Gabriel White, Hanoj Carter, Kendal Taylor and Justin Walker all earned All-America status with their 4x100 squad as they advanced all the way to the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championship in Eugene, Oregon.

"It was an amazing experience, we had two upperclassmen and two freshmen at the time and we ran the fastest time in 30 years," White said.

The Demons' 4x100 relay squad ran a time of 39.57, finishing 11th overall in the nation. That was the best mark by an NSU foursome since 1982. That squad was led by Mark Duper and Joe Delaney, who both became Pro Bowl football stars for the NFL, and who are now in the Louisiana Sports Hall of Fame.

The other All-America was Janae Allen, who won Woman's Field Event Athlete of the Year honors. Allen earned All-American status in the discus with a 10th-place behind a personal record of 176-2 at the NCAA Outdoor Championships, finishing 14 places above her seeding. She earned Southland Conference Field Event Athlete of the Year honors with top five finishes in the first in discus, second in shot put and fifth in the hammer. Sprinter Hanoj Carter, also an All-American, won the men's Freshman of the Year award on the 2013 All-Louisiana Track and Field Team. Walker also made the All-State Team with the second-fastest 100 meter time in Louisiana.

Under Johnson's era, the Demons finished in the top half of the men's team standings at the Southland Conference Outdoor Championships for 16 consecutive seasons from 1989-2005, including championships in 1993, 1999 and 2002. Additionally, his men's indoor teams won four Southland championships. He owns seven Southland Conference Track & Coach of the Year honors, including a pair of newly-named Johnson Awards in 1999 and 2002.

During his tenure, Johnson has coached 57 All-Americans, nearly 100 NCAA championship qualifiers, numerous national champions and USA Olympians. Johnson coached NSU to top-20 finishes in both the NCAA Division I Indoor and Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

This years' season was coached by former Women's Track and Field Head Coach Mike Heimerman, a1998 NSU graduate. Heimerman has been part of the track and field program for a while, with about 18 years of experience with the department. Since his competitive career ended as a student-athlete, he's served as a graduate assistant, assistant coach, and head women's coach.

As for White and his teammates, they say that they "never felt threatened" against other competition. "Me and my teammates were all on the same page, we were just all athletes doing the same thing, running on the same track on the same day."

The Demons look forward to having another good, yet progressive season under new Heimerman, who has big shoes to fill behind the Legendary Leon Johnson.

Northwestern State junior runner Quiana Griffin was named to the 2013 Southland Conference All-Academic Track & Field team Thursday the league office announced Thursday.

The Lake Charles (Barbe HS) native compiled a 3.17 grade point average along with being the anchor of the Lady Demons' third-place 4x400 relay team with a time of 3:45.36 at the Southland Outdoor Championships.

The team also finished fourth at the outdoor championships in the 4x100 relay with a time of 46.10. Individually, she was the runner-up in the 40-meter dash with a 54.55 time.

The women's all-academic team consists of 31 student-athletes including 15 automatic selections while the men's squad consists of 17 student-athletes including seven automatic selections. Sam Houston State led the conference with a combined 10 student-athletes on the all-academic team while Stephen F. Austin earned seven. Central Arkansas and McNeese collected six apiece while Lamar accumulated five. Oral Roberts, Southeastern Louisiana and Texas A&M-Corpus Christi each notched a trio while Nicholls claimed two spots and Northwestern State earned one.

The Southland Conference awards committee, which consists of one administrator from each of the 10 member universities, votes for the student-athletes of the year. The student-athlete of the year award is presented to one student-athlete who achieves excellence in both academics and athletics. All nominees shall have earned at least a 3.2 GPA on a 4.0 scale, and demonstrated athletics achievement for at least two years at the nominating institution. All-academic members earned at least a 3.0 GPA on a 4.0 scale, completed at least one full academic year and participated in at least 50 percent of the school's events.

Named All-American was Janae Allen, who won Woman's Field Event Athlete of the Year honors. Allen earned All-American status in the discus with a 10th-place behind a personal record of 176-2 at the NCAA Outdoor Championships, finishing 14 places above her seeding. The Northwestern State cross country teams rounded out the 2013 season with a 12th place finish for the Demons and a 14th place mark for the Lady Demons at the Southland Conference championships hosted by McNeese State at the Ward 3 Recreation Complex.

Lamar swept top honors for both teams, followed by Stephen F. Austin in second for the men and Central Arkansas as the runner-up for the women.

"Despite our overall finish, we ran good races and they allowed us to evaluate how much everyone has improved throughout the season," said first year head coach Amy Guinn. "Everyone finished well and gave it their best effort."

Sophomore Mitch Landry crossed first for the Demons in 50th place with a time of 27:37.9 in the 8-kilometer race, followed by Albert Gladney in 58th with a time of 27:56.5.

Jeremy Elliot, Lucas Moncla, William Harris and Skylor Reese also competed for the Demons, crossing the line in 75th, 86th, 91st and 92nd, respectively.

Freshman Annie Fillers led the Lady Demons with a 77th place overall finish in the 6-kilometer race in 26:14.7. Shannon Moore notched 80th place in 27:06.6, followed by Asah James, Maya Robertson, Mawardi Berkhadley and Taylor Walker to round of the team.

"As the season comes to an end we can enjoy some down time before regrouping and getting back to work for the indoor season," said Guinn. "We're all looking forward to the track season and to see what we can do as a team."

GREEK WEEK

Northwestern State's annual Greek Week kicked off with the theme "While Zeus is Away, the Greeks Will Play."

The 15 Greek organizations on campus were divided into four teams that corresponded to the Greek Week theme; Team Aphrodite, Team Athena, Team Poseidon and Team Ares.

Team Aphrodite included Alpha Omicron Pi, Alpha Phi Alpha, Pi Kappa Phi, Tau Kappa Epsilon and Theta Chi. Team Athena included Alpha Sigma Alpha, Alpha Kappa Alpha, Kappa Sigma and Pi Kappa Alpha. Team Poseidon consisted of Delta Sigma Theta, Kappa Alpha and Phi Mu. And Team Ares included Sigma Sigma Sigma, Sigma Nu and Zeta Phi Beta.

The purpose of Greek Week is to bring unity throughout all of the Greek community at Northwestern.

"Greek Week was created with the goal of bringing all brothers and sisters together and to also encourage students to forge new friendships amongst Greek members," said Brandi Vincent, College Pan-Hellenic Council president. "Although it is generally a week of competition, Greek Week has a great impact on Greek unity on our campus. All of the events were planned to include all Greek members and appeal to each of our chapters' diverse interests."

The week included many festivities geared toward making the organizations work together.

On Monday, the Office of Greek Life held a barbecue that included a canned food drive, a team stroll off, the all Greek picture and a movie on the lawn. Cans collected at the canned food drive went to the Robeline Food Pantry.

An old NSU Greek Week tradition was brought back with the revival of Song Fest and Open-Mic-Night on Tuesday. Teams performed choreographed dances to songs corresponding with the week's theme or their team name. After the dances, Greek members performed solos to earn points for their teams and showcase hidden talents in the Greek Community.

The biggest competition of the week was the Greek Olympics, held on Organizational Row between the Phi Mu and Kappa Sigma houses. Wednesday's events included dodge ball, trivia, relay races, a 5K race, a chariot race and a mud pit tug-of-war.

On Thursday, the teams participated in a day of service – cleaning up campus. Flowers were also planted outside the Student Union in efforts to beautify campus. Later, the Greek Awards were held in Prather Coliseum. Director of Fraternity and Sorority Life, Natalie Laurence, announced the 2013 Greek Awards.

Team Ares was the overall Greek Week winner.

While the competition was intense, it isn't the real reason behind Greek Week. In the midst of the week's activities, Greeks of all different houses came together.

"It really made me feel great to see our Greek community come together as a whole," said freshman Kayla Logue. "I really enjoyed meeting and getting to know people from other chapters that I would not have met if it hadn't been for Greek Week."

When coming to a new school, many students start looking for connections outside of class. Other than making lasting friendships, Greek life offers leadership opportunities, scholarships and a gateway to getting involved elsewhere on campus. With three College Panhellenic Council chapters, three National Pan-Hellenic Council chapters and seven Interfraternity Council chapters, there is a place for everyone in Greek life at NSU.

Prior to starting the fall semester, each chapter was given the opportunity to meet incoming freshmen through Freshman Connection during the Organizational Browse. The Org Browse gave an overview of what the chapters do on campus, in the community and events held year-round. The anticipation of recruitment began before classes did, and students were eager to find their own set of letters.

The recruitment processes for the different Greek councils were made up of formal and informal recruitments. The College Panhellenic Council took part in a three-day formal recruitment process, with over 140 women participating. Starting with Open House on Friday and ending with Bid Day on Sunday, the weekend was nothing short of busy. The National Pan-Hellenic Council held a variety of informal recruitment events, including the NPHC mixer, open houses and informationals. The Interfraternity Council's recruitment consisted of preview days during Welcome Week where the interested men could visit with current members and attend parties and open houses to find where they best fit.

With so many events going on, and so many choices, it is easy to get lost in the recruitment process. To avoid getting lost and caught up in the moment, prospective members are encouraged to really think about the house that is best for them and their values. The brothers and sisters in the Greek community will share in a lifetime of memories from countless hours spent together, and the best way to get through the process is to think of who would best share in those memories.

No matter how far away from home you go, it is comforting to have an entire chapter by your side every step of the way. The Greek members are so diverse, but they all have one common factor: the letters they share. But it is more than just a set of letters, it is a unique bond and years of tradition that make being Greek unlike being a part of any other organization.

For Greeks philanthropic service is not just an obligation: it's tradition.

Fraternities and sororities create their own opportunities to get involved by hosting at least one main event during the year to raise money for a designated philanthropy. For organizations, these events developed into a tradition that was highly anticipated by both the host and participating organizations.

For the last seven years, Phi Mu Fraternity has raised thousands for the Children's Miracle Network, by hosting an annual bingo event where winners receive designer handbags.

Other chapters established imaginative fundraisers and service projects bringing attention to national issues like the homeless population.

Members of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity dressed up in old, torn clothing, carried cardboard signs and sat on the steps of various buildings to educate students on homeless people. The cardboard sported facts and figures reminding students not to take what they have for granted.

In addition to raising money or bringing awareness, these philanthropic activities effectively foster relationships among Greeks. The opportunity to serve the campus and community allows brothers and sisters of the same organizations to bond and also meet Greeks from other organizations.

Other fraternity and sorority service projects include campus beautification days, tutoring, planting trees and serving food at a community soup kitchen.

Cheerleading is a busy sport for spirited guys and girls. By the time football season is finished, basketball season is quickly approaching and before they know it tryouts are starting back up.

Northwestern State University's cheerleading squad had its best performance ever at the Universal Cheerleaders Association College Spirit Camp at Texas State University – San Marcos.

Northwestern State won first place in the fight song and cheer competition, second place in sideline and third in the game day competition. NSU won the Gameplan Award and the Most Collegiate Award. Vic the Demon won the Personality Award in the mascot competition.

"We have improved each year we have competed," said squad sponsor Amy Dodson, a staff member in the Office of University Recruiting. "Over the last several years, we have established a good reputation among students who want to be part of an outstanding collegiate cheerleading squad."

With at least three intense practices a week on top of weekday games in the spring and tumbling classes, the cheerleaders work hard to support their school. Although it is a big time commitment, being an NSU cheerleader has its perks. Members receive scholarships with various amounts as the number of years they've been on the squad increases. Even though the team members enjoy the extra money, a shared passion for cheering and a desire to bring energy to others is what motivates the team to continue.

The squad competed at the Collegiate Cheerleading National Championship at Disney World in Orlando, Fla., Jan. 17-20, placing fourth in the nation.

"It was a great opportunity for the squad to experience something new and to begin a new tradition," said Captain Kierra Cunningham. "I competed through high school and I can't explain the nervous feeling of butterflies and excitement. It is the most thrilling feeling to step onto the mat knowing you are about to go out with your team to show off what you've worked for all year. Competition is what defines a sport."

Besides cheering, traditions are what help keep the squad together and bonded. They huddle up like a family after every practice. They mingle with alumni, students and Demon fans during tailgating. They also host Thanksgiving and Christmas parties within the squad.

More than just students, more than just cheerleaders or teammates, this is a family.

The latest incarnation of Northwestern State University's 90-year-old mascot, Vic the Demon, debuted during the pre-game show of Sept. 7's matchup versus Southern University. The new Vic led the Demon football team onto the gridiron surrounded by The Inferno, this year's freshman class, just prior to the 6 p.m. kickoff. In anticipation of the new Vic's appearance, Northwestern State's Office of Marketing and Branding created a series of videos about the mascot that could be viewed on YouTube. An earlier video titled "Vic – The Next Generation" depicted how Vic's look has evolved over the decades. The Demon was selected as the school's mascot by student vote in 1923 and acquired the name Vic – short for Victory – in 1984.

How did Vic's image change this year?
VIC: He went from more of a life like demon to a cartoonish demon. He has a tail now. His horns are longer.

Who is responsible for the new image?
VIC: The old mascot and marketing came up with the new mascot.

Does the new costume allow Vic to do new things?
VIC: The old head didn't have a chinstrap. I can do tumbles, backhand springs and back tucks. I can run a lot faster. The head weighs a lot less.

How do you prepare for games and personal appearances?
VIC: I clean the suit. Other than that I just get in it and go. It's normal to me. I get pumped up, listen to a little music and I'm ready to go.

How do you feel about the new image/costume?
VIC: I like it alot. I think this is the best one they had so far.

Have you tried anything new or experimented as Vic?
VIC: I've tried to change his clothing out, like different costumes for different events,like football games, football jersey, things like that.

How did it go over with the audience?
VIC: At first a lot of people didn't like it but I think they're starting to get used to it.

Do you plan to try anything new?
VIC: I plan on doing stunts with the cheerleaders, but doing a lot more stuff than they do as a mascot to show off my agility.

POM PRECISION

STORY Jessie Gabor

The Purple Pizazz Pom line is not only known for their spirit, but also for their mixture of cheer and hip-hop dancing during performances. The Pom line consists of 26 ladies who all have one thing in common: their love for dance.

The Pom line performs at all football and basketball home games, along with selected away games. They also march in the annual homecoming parade and perform at various events in Natchitoches.

Try-outs for the Pom line are rigorous. "This past tryout was one day and consisted of three rounds," freshman pre-dentistry major, Katarina Haymon said. "We were judged on cheer, collegiate image, pom precision and hip-hop."

Dedication is a major asset required when on the Pom line. "We practice every Monday-Thursday starting at 6:30 in the morning," Haymon said. "We learn new dances for every game and additional dances for any special event, such as Senior Day or our collaboration dance with the Demon Dazzlers and NSU Cheerleaders."

The pom line requires dedication and also heart, along with experience in dance. "I chose to try out for Pom line because I had been dancing my whole life and I wanted to continue to do so in college," Kayli Stephens, sophomore pre-med major, said, "Plus, Pom line was a great opportunity for me to better myself and get involved on campus."

The Pom line provides a team for dancing and also a place of friendships.

"My favorite aspect of Pom line is not only the dancing, but the awesome friendships that we form throughout the year," sophomore hospitality management major Rebekah Burleson said. "The girls on the squad are amazing, and I am blessed to have them by my side every day."

"The very first time I saw the Pom line perform, I knew that I had to be a part of the squad," Burleson said. "Not only is dedication required to be on Pom line, but so is heart."

Demon Dazzlers is NSU's premiere dance line accompanying The Spirit of Northwestern band.

They are known for their precise jazz routines and perform at all home football and basketball games and pep rallies. In the fall semester alone, they perform between 15 to 20 times. They also perform at Lady of the Bracelet and nine shows of the Christmas Gala.

To prepare for performances, the Demon Dazzlers practice five days a week for two hours.

"The beginning practices are intense," Captain Falon Jackson, senior social work major, said, "but once we have the choreography and sets are learned, practices are just for refreshing memory."

Jackson comes from a background of studio dancing so basketball season is her favorite. With this being her last year dancing, it hasn't hit her yet. "It'll hit me next year when I'm in the stands watching," Jackson said. This is Jackson's first year as captain, but overseeing her peers has not been a problem. "Our bond is pretty strong," Jackson said.

Rachel Taylor, freshman hospitality, management and tourism and theatre major said her first year experience as a Demon Dazzler has been awesome. "All the girls are sweet," Taylor said. "You definitely get to bond with the whole team." She's been dancing for 14 years and finds competitions fun and a great experience.

The Demon Dazzlers have been competing in competition in Texas for four years and placed first runner up for the last three.

"Personally, there is more pressure when we are competing because our potential trophy could be a tangible testament to all the long hours and hard work," Taylor Walker, sophomore psychology and theatre major with a concentration in dance, said.

Walker has been dancing since middle school.

"My favorite event to perform at is Christmas Gala," Taylor said, "The little kids' reactions are always uninhibited and loud, which only encourages us to perform even better."

SPIRIT OF NORTHWESTERN

STORY Alexis Reliford

Practice, sweltering heat, dedication, endurance, sacrifice; these words are usually used in reference to athletes however, there is a group of students whom these groups of words perfectly fit, and this would be the Spirit of Northwestern marching band.

NSU is extremely lucky to have a band that not only works as hard as the athletes, putting in hours of practice, time and energy, but also for having a group of students who are there cheering the Demons win or lose, rain or shine, at home or away.

The presence of the Spirit of Northwestern, or "SON" can be found in all aspects of the campus. The SON plays the fight song as well as the Alma Mater, two of the most important songs that convey the "spirit" of NSU, and since 1911 the band has only gotten better.

Tradition is important and with things like the pregame block in and music and the Demon spell-out, many of the students who came here in the past can still recognize these things today.

Football is fun, but for many, without the SON the game just isn't the same. The SON helps to pep the players up, and to keep the crowds going. The students in band have some of the most spirit and one can tell by just listening.

The marching band performs in parades, football games, concerts, musical, and pep rallies, making the band a vital part of NSU and the community.

BRINGIN' THE HEAT

STORY Jordan Smith
PHOTOS Kara Scouten

Bringing color and flair to the football field with flags, rifles, sabres and dancing, the Demon Heat work just as hard as the athletes they perform for, and there's a reason why everyone stays in their seats at halftime.

Spinning, counting, running and performing at the same time is something not many can do, but the Demon Heat puts a lot of time and effort into their skill to perfect all aspects of color guard.

The team comes from different backgrounds of training, which can make the first week a little difficult for some. Cady Hunt recalls that, "It was a lot different than my high school. I was used to being the best, but then I got here and it was a challenge." On the opposite side of the spectrum, Albert Reed had a little bit of a head start when it came to the Demon Heat. "For me, Estelle was my instructor in high school too, so things really aren't that different," said Reed.

The color guard began their season with two weekends of auditions in late spring, and then spent about a week learning the first show during band camp before the start of the fall semester. Band camp may seem like fun and games, but it is a time to test the strength and will of the color guard. Over 12 hours in the heat of Louisiana summer is not easy, especially when they are constantly running drills and learning new choreography. When the band goes inside and the sports teams take a break during the hottest hours, the Demon Heat was on the black top setting drill. The end result is what everyone works for and that is a completed show. "It's rewarding at the end when you get to see an end result for all the hard work you've put in," said Reed.

When school starts, though, that's when the real work begins. The time commitment and practice schedule are rigorous, practicing five days a week for two hours a day in addition to football games. Between a full course load, part time jobs and being involved in other organizations, it's easy to get overwhelmed. "It's your whole life. We practice every day, more than the band does. It's a lot harder than what people think," said Hunt. Hunt has learned to stay organized and balanced, which have helped her tremendously.

In addition to performing at halftime, the color guard also hosts Demon Drum and Guard Day with the drumline. At Demon Drum and Guard Day, students from high schools all across the area are invited to learn a routine from the Demon Heat and perform it with them at a home football game later that day. "You get to teach others something they've never done before. It's a rewarding experience," Reed said.

This year, the Demon Heat and Spirit of Northwestern were invited to perform at the Independence Bowl in place of the University of Arizona's marching band. According to Hunt, "We had so much to learn, but it was so much fun. We had to learn all of their chants, their fight song, a new routine, all in about an hour." Hunt also said it was the biggest stadium she had performed in. "We felt like a huge university, it was a great experience."

When the fall semester ends, so do the football games and weeklong practices, but the Demon Heat moves on to winter guard. Winter guard is strictly color guard, performed and competed indoors and uses a CD track as opposed to a marching band. For the members, it gives them a chance to learn more choreography, typically more difficult skills, most of which aren't suited for outdoor performances. The Demon Heat competes all over Louisiana in the Louisiana & Mississippi Color Guard and Percussion Circuit, or LMCGPC. After winning their division last season, they are back to win this season, constantly representing Northwestern as the best in the business.

Work for the Demon Heat never stops, but that's what makes them so great. They strive for perfection on and off the field. The captain and section leaders are a main reason why the team does so well at performances and competitions, as they keep up morale and skill. Leaders this year consisted of Sarah Giror as captain, and Ashleigh Todd, Burgandy Farris, Regine Lyons, Nick Myers and Jamie Guillot as section leaders.

The thrill of the yearbook has diminished since we entered college. Maybe it's because Facebook is around to hold memories of our college experience, but 30 years from now, Facebook will be a thing of the past. Taking a look inside the yearbook thirty years from now, we'll be transported back to Natchitoches, back to tailgating, back to Kyser Hall, something the Internet will never be able to do.

The diverse students of Northwestern State University line the pages of the Potpourri. Without them, there would be nothing to write about or photograph. The Potpourri staff, just like the students of NSU, is very diverse. By adding diversity in skill sets and interests, the Potpourri is able to represent Northwestern as a whole.

Returning for her second year on staff, Catherine Wagoner has been able to see some big changes in the yearbook from last year.

"It's very organized this year, and I feel like every editor makes the yearbook bigger and better than the year before," Wagoner said. "We've been focusing on incorporating what the typical student wants to read about, making it more interesting to the audience." Instead of the standard shot of a building and history of the department housed inside, the concentration is on who is inside and what they do.

Being on the yearbook staff has helped Wagoner in more ways than one. Starting as the Freshman Scholar, she was able to fully immerse herself in the campus. Though she is a biology major, she feels the writing experience sets her apart from her peers.

On the other hand, photographer Dariane Williams does plan to use her skills in her professional life.

"Being on the Potpourri helps me to practice and improve my photography," Williams said. "I just started taking pictures, and I've really enjoyed the challenge of being on staff."

Being on the yearbook staff is a rewarding experience. Recording the history of Northwestern is a task that not every student has the opportunity to do. And though it is demanding at times, it offers real-world experience in a learning environment.

For the past 100 years, the Current Sauce has given Northwestern students the inside scoop on news, sports and student opinions. The newspaper staff works around the clock to tell NSU what is happening around campus and the community.

With the past 99 years of the Current Sauce being digitized, current Editor-In-Chief Jarrod Roberts, who is a senior Mass Communication major, has been looking at past issues for inspiration. "There were lots of female opinion editors in the 1970's who wrote about women's rights. Earlier issues included ads for 69 cent KFC combos. I even saw lots of oddly modern designs from the 1930's," Roberts said.

"I've found that the Current Sauce has kind of fallen in the past few years, and I want to change that," Roberts said. One of the many changes Roberts made was incorporating the students more. For instance, the Student Life section, which takes up a quarter of the issue, now includes the NS"U" portion, comprised solely of student opinions on diverse issues.

The Current Sauce would not be possible without the staff. Editors, reporters and photographers are what make the paper, constantly generating new ideas and articles.

Maintaining an interest in print journalism, Current Sauce reporter Olivia Martzell is very excited about working on the paper. Though Martzell has experience in journalism via internships, working for a student paper is completely different. The stories and audience are different, and Martzell enjoys the challenge the Sauce brings her.

Aside from recording Northwestern's history, Kara Scouten, Current Sauce photographer, has enjoyed working with the paper because of the photography challenge. She has been able to adapt to the style of photography newspapers require, as it is unlike what she typically shoots.

Since it began in 1913, the Current Sauce has thrived and continues to bring Northwestern the news they want to read. In its prime, the Current Sauce was producing eight to ten page issues, and that is where Roberts wants to bring the paper back to. With the help of his staff, Roberts has been working on making the paper something people want to read. "It may not happen this semester, or even this year, but I want to get the ball rolling," Roberts said.

When Potpourri last caught up with KNWD in 2012, NSU's student-run radio station planned to revive Demon Fest and stream live broadcasts online. One summer of intense renovations later, KNWD returns with an entirely upgraded sound system, a fully functioning recording studio, a new website and an iPhone app for live streaming.

"The offices look more professional and we look more like a legitimate organization rather than a basement," Micah Pickering, a junior mass communications major, said.

Taylor Furr, a junior liberal arts major, believes that the renovations "really show how we've evolved." Furr is KNWD's audio editor and has been a staff member for the station for three years, making him the longest serving staff member.

"Working with KNWD has really been the most meaningful part of college for me," Furr said.

Thanks to the station's much-needed facelift, Pickering, the news director, says he his News at Noon segment now has more resources, such as the phone line and special guests from other RSOs.

As for the recording studio, musicians on campus can catch their big break by having their music professionally recorded. The recording studio also enables staff members to broadcast live recordings of football games and concerts.

KNWD's first official live broadcast took place on Aug. 30, 2013, and since then, anyone with Internet access can listen to the station. While the live broadcasts were originally intended to allow out-of-state parents to "attend" their children's games or concerts, the live radio streaming managed to reach those with no affiliation with NSU. One student DJ managed to reach LSU's airwaves during his radio show–with permission, of course!

"If nothing else, we've got other people tuning into our station," Furr said.

[Our first live broadcast] is one of the biggest events I'm proud of," general manager Daniel Thiels, a senior mass communications major, said.

While the KNWD staff of 2012-2013 managed to revive

Demon Fest, a music festival showcasing student and alumni talent, the KNWD of today is coordinating concerts every month.

Thiels found that the music scene on campus was "lacking pretty badly," thus he felt that continuous concerts would "try and bring more life to this campus." In addition, Thiels said, the concerts give area bands an opportunity to play for college students.

NSU's literary magazine Argus was founded in 1978 by Dr. Christine Ford in the Language and Communication Department, thereby making her the first advisor of Argus.

What exactly is an "Argus"? Argus was a giant with 100 eyes in Greek mythology who was often symbolized by the peacock.

We have no idea why that myth held meaning for the students and advisor, but we like the peacock idea," Dr. Julie Kane, the current advisor of Argus, said.

This years' theme is Dream Sequence and the peacock motif will return once again. To pick a theme, the Argus staff must do a brainstorm session. The theme must be something with different interpretations, Kristen Hadley, the assistant editor, said.

Argus is 100 percent student content, meaning every poem, story, photograph and art piece is made by an NSU student.

This year, even the cover of Argus is made by a student, a first in the magazine's history. The cover, along with all of the student-submitted works, are picked by a panel of judges who specialize in the magazine's respective categories.

"There are not a lot of outlets for creative writing on campus," Hadley said. "So our goal is to have [student] work published in an award-winning journal."

Before the Journalism Department was eradicated, Argus often participated in the Associate Collegiate Press annual contests.

While each winner in each category is guaranteed a cash prize, Argus does not only publish the winners. Everyone has an opportunity to get published!

EVENT EXTRAVAGANZA

STORY Jacob Labutka

They can't exactly afford to book shows featuring teenage heartthrobs like One Direction, but the Student Activities Board works year round to ensure good times for all at NSU. From hosting concerts to putting up zip lines, planning events takes more effort for those setting up than attending a few meetings a month.

SAB members such as president Alayni Guidry must balance executive roles with other extracurricular and academic responsibilities.

"I literally can't keep track of the number of hours spent with SAB," Guidry said. "A rep-at-large is required to work 3 hours a week. They are also required to work at least one hour at each event and the entire event if deemed a large event. For myself on the other hand, I don't stop working. Being president of a large organization like SAB is a great honor, but it requires work."

Vice-president Jebha Babu can be seen frantically rushing all over campus to accomplish her endless to-do list. Her disposition embodies the kind of personality SAB looks for in its officers.

"You have to be outgoing and be able to voice your opinions respectfully," Babu said. "You also have to be level-headed and open to suggestions. Most importantly, members must know how to have fun to be a part of our chill and family oriented crew."

After joining SAB, members quickly realize how much effort goes into planning events, especially since at any given time the organization must plan multiple events simultaneously. Officers not only juggle the work of different committees, but they must also ensure events attract large crowds while adhering to budget constraints.

"Usually the threat to the budget is when we try to get a band or amusement such as the zip line for homecoming," Special Events Coordinator Damian Glover said. "Entertainment and amusement for students are the most troublesome parts of activities to plan for within our budget."

Despite the time commitment, SAB members take pride in their work and manage to have fun in the process. Through planning a series of events, many SAB members develop attachment to their favorite ones.

"It's really hard to choose my favorite event," Babu said. "One of my favorite events I helped plan was the Relaxation Station where students were given massages at all three NSU campuses. It was right before finals week so students could relax and pick up free scantrons for their finals. I also really enjoyed karaoke at Lobby Life and Spring Fling."

After hours, days and weeks of planning an event, seeing the fruits of their labor motivates SAB members to work hard.

"The best part of working on SAB is providing 'fun' for this campus," Guidry said. "SAB is a great organization. We don't see our members just as other students, but as a family. We are there for each other regardless of the circumstances. When students are able to say 'thanks, that event was awesome' I believe my job is a success."

Overall, the fun atmosphere SAB creates, both at their events and within their organization, contributes to the group's success.

ABOVE Student Activities Board members, Alayni Guidry, Rodney Haynes, Corrine Nagim, Kaymin Carter and Julia Barry take a break from passing out free goodies to students. In addition to throwing some of the largest events on campus, including Spring Fling, SAB gives away prizes small and large ranging from sunglasses to iPads.

Made up of senators, executives, and justices working diligently, Student Government is there to make sure student fees, issues and concerns are all dealt with to the satisfaction of their constituents. Serving as a liaison between students and faculty, SGA is always looking for a way to get more knowledge to the students about what's going on.

"It surprises me how students' reactions change once they are informed about certain issues dealing with their funds," Speaker of the Senate Lamario Fortson said. He has been in SGA for three years now and has seen the changes; the highs and lows, but knows that he can still help "make a change."

SGA held a Fee Forum in the fall semester, which was used to describe each organization's budget and explain where the money is being allocated. Different organizations were given a chance to describe their budget as they held a Q & A afterwards. The Athletic Department, Potpourri, and the Current Sauce were just some of the topics dealing with funds.

"The fee forum was very helpful and successful. It gave students a chance to ask questions and get details on where their money was going," SGA Treasurer De'Andrea Sanders said. The turnout was nice as they had a room full of students and faculty working to get down to business.

At the beginning of the spring semester, SGA got a new changeover as former SGA President Steve Chapel was brought in to help advise. Chapel was the SGA President from 2007-2008. He was a freshman class senator and the commissioner of Student Affairs prior to his presidency.

"I want to start off firstly by helping SGA be more beneficial to the student body," Chapel said. He just wants to get SGA back running in the "positive direction" that it should be. "I would like to rebuild this organization by getting a better working constitution and by-laws," he added. With a back pocket full of ideas, Chapel has good plans in store for the future of SGA, as he wants to reach more students to help identify their problems, bettering the school and community as a whole.

Student Government Association is the voice of the school, and is open to any student who wants to join. With a maximum of 36 people, elections to be on senate take place at the beginning of each academic semester.

SUPERIOR STAFF

Pot-pour-ri (n)

A collection of miscellaneous literary extracts; any mixture, esp. Of unrelated objects, subjects, etc.

Letter From the Editor

We aren't the first and we aren't the last. This staff didn't create anything that wasn't already there and we didn't do anything that was overly phenomenal. But, what I hope we did do is continue a legacy and produce a book worthy of showcasing some of your college memories.

To say making this book was easy would be a lie. But we came together and worked hard, and I would not trade this experience for the world.

As only a junior and the oldest member on the Potpourri staff this year I was faced with the dilemma of not only creating a publication NSU could be proud of, but also forging a bond between almost complete strangers.

To say thank you would never be enough, but to say nothing would be even worse. Thank you to everyone who helped make this year's Potpourri one of the best NSU has seen.

To my amazing staff, thank you for everything and know that my spazz attacks were only because I wanted to create a publication that showcases only a bit of the talent you all possess. Thank you for your dedication and perseverance through our year of ups and downs.

To our families, friends, and loved ones who endured countless stories, interview questions and late-night rants thank you. Without you we probably would have went crazy.

Most importantly to the students, thank you for opening this book and taking the time to gawk over our pictures or read the stories. For without you, we are nothing.

We came to NORTHWESTERN STATE UNIVERSITY to become what our families always HOPED for and live out our childhood DREAMS. We looked forward to what our FUTURE might bring. While on our path of DISCOVERY we found ourselves cheering on the DEMONS at every sporting event and studying LATE at the library, joining organizations where we felt we BELONGED and making friends who became FAMILY.

Through it all,

WE BECAME DEMONS.

COLOPHON

The 2014 Potpourri is the official yearbook of Northwestern State University of Natchitoches, Louisiana, and was created entirely by students. The 2014 Potpourri was produced on a total editorial budget funded by the students of the university.

All full-time students of any Northwestern campus in fall 2013 may receive a book. Those students who did not pay the student association fee in the fall semester or those wanting additional copies may purchase a yearbook for $25. Those wishing to have a book mailed may submit their address and a $10 shipping fee to Stephanie Masson, 318 Kyser Hall, Natchitoches, LA 71497.

The 103rd volume was printed on 157gsm China Gold East matte paper by Multi-Media Technology Group of Poplarville, Miss. The book was produced in the USA and printed in China using Adobe Creative Suite 6.0 software on Mac computers with a press run of 2,700. Univers Lt Std font family was used throughout the book.
